Equity Index Semi-Annual Reconstitution Recap

March 2025

Reconstitution semi-annually ensures investability and broad market representation.

The Bloomberg equity indices are designed to rebalance periodically to reflect the aggregate performance of its members. To accurately maintain a representation of each market, a semi-annual reconstitution process is undertaken. Companies are re-evaluated to determine where they rank along market cap thresholds, security counts, and investment styles.

Addition Spotlight: Robinhood (HOOD)

The B500 is Bloomberg's US Large Cap Price Return Index, consisting of the 500 most highly capitalized US companies by float market cap. Changes to the B500 Index reflect the results of a purely rules-based index design focused on measuring markets with transparency and representativeness beyond market capitalization alone. As a result, the B500 eliminates potential biases and systematically evaluates potential members, which may lead to earlier additions of qualified companies when compared to indices that also incorporate a judgement-based approach.

Not all index providers operate with the same level of transparency and clarity when it comes to index additions. Robinhood's (HOOD) addition is an example of transparency in action. While the name has been added to the Bloomberg 500, it is still not included in the S&P 500.

Bloomberg US Large Cap Index (B500) - Additions & Deletions

Cont'd: Addition Spotlight: Robinhood (HOOD)

The stock's market capitalization puts it well within the top 500 companies by market capitalization, with HOOD ranked #254 in our Bloomberg 3000 as of February month-end. The usual culprit for such an omission within the S&P 500 is the financial viability screen, which limits inclusion to those stocks whose four previous quarter of earnings in aggregate are positive, as is the most recent quarter.

But in examining HOOD's financial results, the company met this eligibility after their Q1 2024 earnings report last year. This suggests that the reason the stock has not been added to SPX is the committee made the decision not to. Viability screens and managing an index by committee introduce security selection biases which are not ideal in a benchmark.

Bloomberg methodologies leave no room for ambiguity or confusion, with clearly described conditions and subsequent actions that will take place. Bloomberg's US equity index methodology is designed for precision; it is rules-based and transparent, aiming to provide users with clear, foreseeable, broad-based market exposure, free of undue subjectivity. Should a security meet the criteria laid out in a methodology, a user can feel confident that the name is in, or will be added to, an index.
